

Province To Cut Criminal Court Delays

The Association of Legal Aid Lawyers is pleased to see the initiatives that Attorney General Chris Bentley is taking to reduce criminal court delays. Our association is dedicated to providing the highest possible level of legal representation to lower-income Ontarians. Our members are salaried employees funded by Legal Aid Ontario and include duty counsel who daily advise and represent the criminally accused.

The strategy calling for 17 more legal aid offices to be established inside courthouses is a reasonable step in increasing access to justice, but it is only a beginning.

Recognition and support of the professional capacity of duty counsel to effectively engage in their role is essential if the province hopes to realistically address backlogs and delays. In addition to a "dedicated prosecution" system, the justice system requires a "dedicated defence" system.

Our association hopes that Bentley will soon remunerate legal aid lawyers on a par with Crown attorneys. Only if this is done can lower-income Ontarians obtain the same service as the ministry provides in its prosecution against them.

Recently there was a terrible mass murder in Calgary. An architect, Joshua Lall, who worked for COHOS AVEY, the firm that built RECENTLY THERE WAS A TERRIBLE MASS MURDER IN CALGARY. AN ARCHITECT, JOSHUA LALL, WHO WORKED FOR COHOS AVEY THE FIRM THAT BUILT CSIS HEADQUARTERS IN OTTAWA WHICH HAD ITS IP COMMUNICATIONS SUPPLIED BY CISCO SYSTEMS WHICH HIRED THE FORMER DEPUTY DIRECTOR OF THE NATIONAL CLANDESTINE SERVICE JOHN SANO AS DIRECTOR OF BUSINESS DEVELOPMENT IN ITS GLOBAL GOVERNMENT SOLUTIONS GROUP. NOT A TYPICAL DAY AT WORK AT THAT FIRM I WOULD SAY. WE SPECULATED THAT JOSHUA WAS A SPECIALIST BLACK OPERATION HIT. HE WAS SWEATING NOT BECAUSE HE HAD MENTAL HEALTH ISSUES, BUT KNOWLEDGE THAT COULD AFFECT NATIONAL SECURITY. THAT SEEMS LIKE A STRETCH TO THE UNINFORMED, BUT A CSIS AGENT WAS MURDERED BY HER BOYFRIEND WHO HAD JUST FLOWN IN FROM CALGARY. WAS ANOTHER ERASURE MAN ERASED? YOU BET. YOU CAN WRITE THE SCRIPTS IN ADVANCE AND ADD THE NAMES LATER.

Friends shocked

Couple found dead in Orléans broke up only days ago

Andrew Seymour and Jessey Bird, The Ottawa Citizen

OTTAWA - Alicia Bateman and Ryan Sawchuk moved into the two-storey red-brick home on Côté Royale in Orléans a few years ago, after leaving Calgary to start a life together in Ottawa.

Ms. Bateman had landed a job with the Canadian Security Intelligence Service, and Mr. Sawchuk had hoped to find work after he moved east.

Mr. Sawchuk returned to Calgary March or April of 2007 when he couldn't find a job, but the couple stayed together despite the distance, and in December, were engaged to be married.

Police keep a close eye on a house Sunday, June 1, 2008, that was the scene of a suspected murder suicide Saturday in Orléans.

David Gonczol, The Ottawa Citizen

Mr. Sawchuk's grandmother, Mary Sawchuk, said the pair had visited her for lunch that month and seemed very much in love. Mr. Sawchuk had his arm around Ms. Bateman and was tickling the hair at the back of her neck, she recalled in a phone interview from Calgary.

A week ago, however, for reasons still unknown, the couple broke up.

Shortly after that, police say Mr. Sawchuk made a last-minute trip to Ottawa, perhaps hoping to reconcile with the petite, fair-haired Ms. Bateman.

On Saturday, just after 5 p.m., police were called to the home the 28-year-olds once shared at 302 Côté Royale Cres. and what they discovered has left the quiet neighbourhood reeling and has shocked people who knew the pair.

Mr. Sawchuk was found hanged inside the house and Ms. Bateman was found dead in a Jeep in the garage, in what police say is a murder-suicide.

Police say there was obvious trauma to Ms. Bateman's body, although the cause of death won't be known until an autopsy is performed Monday in Kingston.

Police can't say at this point what, if any, weapon Mr. Sawchuk used to kill Ms. Bateman.

Forensic teams are still processing the scene and police won't say if they recovered a note. However, they say there was no indication Mr. Sawchuk would commit such an act.

"To do something like this, I don't understand it," Ms. Sawchuk said on Monday.

"Why would he do such a thing? There's no rhyme or reason to it."

Calgarian Jason Konoff played hockey with Mr. Sawchuk in a men's league for about six years. He hadn't seen Mr. Sawchuk for about a year and the man wasn't on the team list for this summer's league.

He was "shocked" to hear about what happened.

"From what I knew of him, he was a relaxed and laid back kind of guy," Mr. Konoff said last evening.

"I couldn't see him even remotely being capable of that, based on his attitude and nature."

"I never saw him as a moping type."

Mr. Sawchuk's grandmother said he was "a jokey fellow" who she last saw last month when he stopped by, ate dinner and borrowed a cook book. Nothing seemed out of the ordinary, Ms. Sawchuk said of her grandson, who loved cooking and had recently found work with Mazda.

Then, about two weeks later, Ms. Sawchuk's son, Barry Sawchuk - Ryan's father - stopped in to give her the news: "Ryan is dead."

Late Saturday afternoon, neighbour

Tammy Bastarache said she heard a man scream - a sound that made her think something was terribly wrong.

Shortly after that, Sean Burns, who lives down the street, said neighbours saw the body of a woman wearing a white shirt and jeans being pulled from the garage and watched as paramedics tried to resuscitate Ms. Bateman.

Manon Bérubé, a spokeswoman for CSIS, declined to say what Ms. Bateman's position was with the spy agency.

"We are deeply saddened and shocked by her death," Ms. Bérubé said, adding the agency had no further comment because the police investigation was ongoing.

Sunday afternoon, the house remained cordoned off as investigators continued their probe.

The sight of police investigators has upset the residents of the quiet, tree-lined street. They remembered Ms. Bateman as friendly, but very private. She was often seen jogging or walking her dog.

"She was a person in our neighbourhood who we didn't know all that well, but it is our neighbourhood," said 35-year-old Mr. Burns, who lives with his wife and children.

"This is a quiet street, with a few families and a few singles, and the worst thing that happens here is graffiti ... and we talk about that for months," he said.

Vicky Swinburne-Kennelly, 58, has lived in the neighbourhood for more than 20 years.

"It is a very quiet neighbourhood. The biggest thing we ever have is an ambulance for the seniors," she said.

A neighbour who did not want to be identified is looking after Ms. Bateman's dog - a boxer that Mr. Burns said was named Jenna.

Unusual Reactive Behaviour Evidence of Electronic Mind Control in Switzerland

Unusual Reactive Behavior Evidence of Electronic Mind Control in Switzerland?

Unusual Reactive Behavior Evidence of Electronic Mind Control in Switzerland? Ken,

I've been trying to help a fellow in Switzerland who found me via Educate-Yourself. Rather strangely, he has been giving me a liberal education about health, and I thought I was well rounded in natural health! One of the big problems in his particular case is a cell phone tower of some type on an official building across the street. When it is turned on it affects him badly, along with his wife. I do realize that some people are ultra sensitive to special frequencies, and thought that this was applicable in this case. Recent communications indicate that we are all being affected! Apparently they are located at the beginning of a massive Beta Test of major mind control technology. The implications, via the specifics of his missive, partly reproduced below and edited, are mind-boggling to say the least. The man spells it out very clearly, no need for my comments.

Philip N. Ledoux

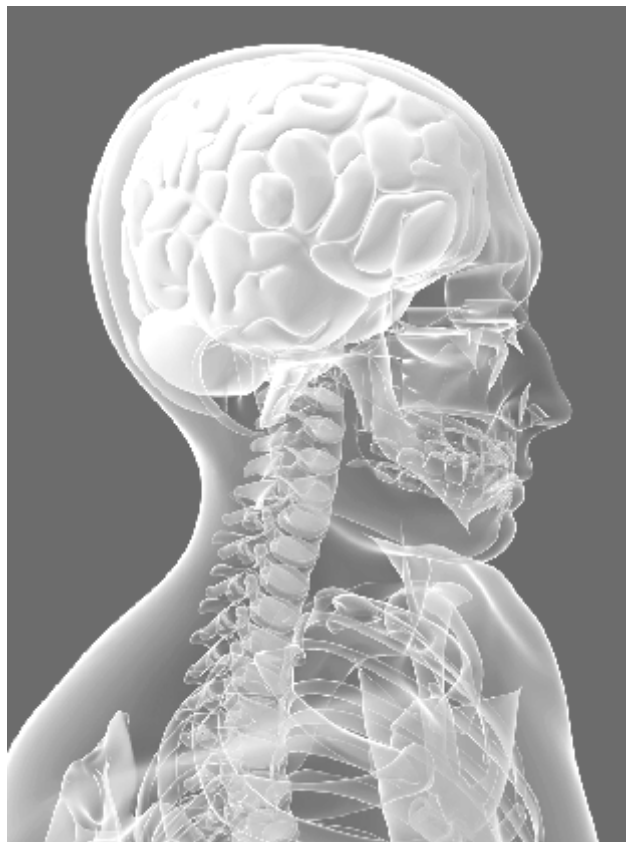

"Every week when my wife has a day off she is not able to recharge herself because of the antennas that are ON NON-stop. Because of the antenna output, she gets only 5 hours sleep every night. This has been going on for at least the last two weeks. We are both really in a struggle for survival.

She told me today that all her fellow workers are making mistake after mistake over the last two weeks, they keep complaining that they forget everything and they need so much sleep. They take orders from the customers, and a second later they forgot what was ordered. So everyone is in a struggle to keep their heads clear. Also many regular customers are not able to speak whole sentences anymore, they speak fragmented when they place an order.

We see it all around us now when we go shopping; all the shoppers including the check-out-clerks look completely zombie-like and lost. People are regularly dropping things when they try to place it in their shopping basket. The floor of the supermarket is littered with things that people have dropped. It is also interesting to observe when people stand in front of the products -- it takes minutes before they made up their mind and place it in their shopping basket... They are just staring. Not only for them, but we also react the same way.

For the last few weeks people are also driving very, very slowly on the roads here, I assume because they have such a hard time concentrating. It is also interesting to see that when the antennas are ON that people don't stop anymore when you make clear that you want to cross a zebra crossing. (Zebra refers to the horizontal stripes marking a pedestrian crossing.) They simply don't see you when you are standing at the beginning of a Zebra !!! While normally here in Switzerland they ALWAYS stopped when you stand on the sidelines waiting and making clear that you want to cross the zebra to the other side of the road. I mean it is even a law here, everybody knows that you will get a heavy fine if a car doesn't allow you as a pedestrian to cross on a zebra. You have to STOP, but now people don't see you standing waiting. Everybody is really blind now, by the day it is getting more intense.

For my feeling we are getting closer and closer to a deadline that something horrible is going to happen again, it isn't by accident the towers are putting out more and more power."
